

Long Island Children's Museum

Going to the Long Island
Children's Museum

We are going to the Long Island Children's Museum to explore and play! When we get there, I will see a big grey and orange building with a sign that says the LICM.

We will then go inside the big yellow doors under the sign that says Long Island Children's Museum. If I need help opening the door I can push the silver and blue button.

When we get inside we will see the water fountains and the bathrooms. I can ask an adult to help me if I need a drink of water or need to use the bathroom.

If we need tickets, we can get on the line at the Box Office to purchase tickets. I will have to be patient and wait my turn if there are others on line. If we already have our tickets, we do not have to go to the Box Office.

If I am feeling overwhelmed we can borrow the Sensory Backpack which will have a weighted lap-pad, headphones and other things to help me stay relaxed.

Once we have our tickets, we can bring them to the little Yellow Ticket Booth and show the staff. There might be other people on the line so I will have to wait my turn. Once the staff member checks our tickets we can go into the museum!

There are lots of fun exhibits at the museum! There are two floors with all different exhibits. Some exhibits might be closed because they are being fixed, but that is okay because we can visit them the next time we come to the museum.

If I see an exhibit I want to visit I can tell my adult. It is important to stay with my adult.

If I am feeling overwhelmed or anxious I can go to the Sensory Room located on the second floor of the Museum. In the Sensory Room I can use some of the tools to help me feel calm. I can stay in the Sensory Room until I am ready and then I can go back into the museum to play!

If I can't find my adult I can ask one of the staff members wearing a bright blue apron for help.

When we are all done with our visit my adult will tell me it is time to go. I might be sad to leave, but that is okay because I can come back to the Long Island Children's Museum another day!
